CARTOONIST FALLS TO DEATH FROM A HOTEL WINDOW

CHICAGO, October 4.—Stewart W. Carothers, a well known cartoonist, fell from a window of the De Johannes hotel early this morning and was instantly killed. The police found the body in the alley. H. L. Rhinner and H. Bergman, with whom he spent the night, were ignorant of his death until the body was found by the police. They said they did not know how he happened to fall from the window. Carothers was the originator of the "Charley Chaplin comic strips."
